Mythic's newest citizen, Dr. Ana McKinnon, has a secret. No one knows; not even the Werewolf pack that has taken her under their protection. When Ana unexpectedly receives invitation to Mythic's most prestigious event, a masquerade ball hosted by the reclusive Vlane Masterson, she doesn't want to go. She only accepts when she realizes that not going will draw more unwanted attention to herself than going.

It's a good plan. At least until the master vampire himself finds her alone and decides to sample the goods. Vlane Masterson awakens the morning after his annual soirée to find that something changed him, utterly. The vampires are understandably concerned; anything that can render such a powerful being vulnerable can upset the delicate balance of power and fragile alliances between the various preternatural, extraordinary creatures that call Mythic home. The last thing he remembers is partaking of a particularly lovely creature dressed as a legendary Faerie. But who is she? And why can't he stop thinking about her? Where could she be ... his mysterious Faerie?
