Prince Frederick Von Dresden of Bavaria is looking for a wife. In Cassandra, he finds a young woman unaware of his true identity who might learn to love him for himself and not his title and wealth. Cassandra has just made her debut and is shocked to discover that her father has promised her in marriage to a complete stranger. This virginal young noblewoman is unsure if she will be able to give herself to a man she meets at the altar on her wedding day. Their attraction is immediate and undeniable but can she ever forgive her family for rushing her into an arranged union and give her new marriage a chance at happiness?
