Amanda Taylor gave up her dream of being a writer. She was told that being something practical like an accountant was the "right thing to do." Unsatisfied and unfulfilled, she gets the gift of a lifetime when a large inheritance is left to her. The catch? She has to undergo training. Training seems like a harm hurdle to jump before she finds out who is to train her. Mathis Côté, Amanda's teenage crush who had suddenly disappeared from her life. Mathis was the first person to make Amanda's heart flutter, but now, a successful wealthy hedge fund manager, he is arrogant and cold. The modest kind boy she had fallen for is now a grown handsome cocky man with an end amount of women throwing themselves at him. Has he forgotten the summer they spent together? The summer they fell in love? Now, Amanda has the chance to not only fulfill her dreams of being a writer, but also to fall in love all over again. But will Mathis let his guard down for Amanda? Is he still that same kind boy she fell in love with? Is he even the one for Amanda?
