From the pages of The Lovecraft Ezine, Joseph S. Pulver's A SEASON IN CARCOSA, and the maddest mountain peaks of Cosmic Horror come twelve tales already guaranteed to get one hell of a rise out of a crowd. Dedicated to the keeper of the shared universe in which the first two tales are spun, that of Robert W. Chambers' THE KING IN YELLOW, a work so important and strange that even Lovecraft Went There. To the rooftops of Lost Carcosa, a hidden city just slightly behind yours, where you will see things that happen nowhere else. Twelve, in fact.

A love song to Stephen King's Boogeyman. A robotic Moon expedition supervised by Nikola Tesla. The greatest Surrealist of all time directing THE KING IN YELLOW as a play at the Jarry Theatre in Paris, 1929. Dracula's son calling out Sherlock Holmes. An Elder God calling out BP Oil. What may be the world's first or second Vegan Zombie. And more. Please step inside the main tent and Observe...
